MAZER'S AMAZING STORY OF MURDER

OF PUBLISHER DON R. MELLETT MAY CLEAR UP THE MYSTERY

Stark County Grand Jury Is To Hear the Confession of One of Arch Conspirators Tuesday—It Implicates Detective Streitenberger, Who, It Is Alleged, Waited With Mazer in the Tall Grass To Catch the Editor and Beat Him Up—Pat McDermott Gunned the Plot By Firing and Killing the Crusader, As the Latter Left His Garage.

Altho Prosecutor Harry W. Harter Jr., refused to reveal what took place in a two-hour closed conference with Louis Mazer of Canton, Saturday, it became known thru semi-official sources that Mazer will make a "clean breast" of the plot which resulted in the murder of Don R. Mellett Canton publisher, before the grand jury Tuesday.

Mazer, one of the quartet indicted on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the editor's killing last July 16, will give the grand jury for the first time the complete version of the murder and its ramifications from the lips of one who actually was involved.

Here is Mazer's story as it is reported to have been told to Prosecutor Harter and a court stenographer Saturday.

Mazer and Floyd Streitenberger, former city detective, who was indicted in connection with the murder Thursday, planned to "beat up" Mellett. They, with Patrick Eugene McDermott, went to Mellett's home the night of July 15.

They left McDermott there and returned for a while to Streitenberger's home, then went back to the murder scene, arriving just as Mellett was storing his automobile in his garage. As they were creeping forward thru the waist high weeds of a vacant lot across the street, McDermott opened fire suddenly, Mazer said.

Mazer, it is said, denied that he and Streitenberger had had any part in killing Mellett, intending merely to administer a severe beating. His story coincides remarkably with one told by an unnamed witness immediately after the murder and presented to the first grand jury which investigated the case and returned indictments against Mazer, Ben Rudner convicted as one of the "trigger men."

This witness reported that he was on his way to Massillon, the night of the murder when he met Mazer near Mellett home. Mazer gave an excuse for being in the vicinity and they confessed McDermott and a stranger were with Mazer and their car was driven by another man whose name was mentioned during the early investigations, the witness said.

They went to the home of a police officer not far away, but he was not there, according to the witness. Returning shortly before the murder, he said, he found the same men still were in the vicinity. They went to the same officer's home, he continued, and found him there, whereupon the policeman and one of the men went downtown and the others remained near the Mellett home.

The informant drove away before the murder, which took place shortly after midnight, and said he did not know anything about the plotter's plans.

This witness volunteered the story shortly after the murder, but later, after Carl Studer had been released on bond on a charge of perjury in the civil service commission case which ousted S. A. Lengel as police chief, he refused to testify before the grand jury, saying he was afraid to testify and that he only had "heard" the story. Still later he admitted it was a matter of personal knowledge.

Mazer's story varies in details with that reported to have been told by McDermott to relatives visiting him in the penitentiary.

McDermott is declared to have said he was ready to fire at Mellett from an automobile, after being awakened from a drunken sleep, when Streitenberger and Mazer opened fire from the weeds behind him opposite the Mellett home.

Mazer, it is declared, denied that he and Streitenberger were on the actual scene of the murder and blamed McDermott for the shooting.

An expert from the Winchester Arms factory testified in the McDermott and Rudner trials that at least two revolvers were used in the shooting.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE PUT ON BY THE C. OF C.

Organization is a Worthy One
Backed by the Business Men of the City.

The chamber of commerce membership drive is on. The results have been gratifying. The men of Circleville who have neglected to become associated with the chamber of commerce are coming in to help make this a bigger and better year for the old town. They are getting out of the rut that has kept them from taking the interest in Circleville that they have always had. They have been sitting along the side lines watching the game. They are going to do their share toward helping the other fellow push the wheels of progress. No town can prosper and progress without citizens who are interested in its welfare.

Too many people in Circleville have the energy to do but have needed someone to turn on the switch to put this energy in motion. The chamber of commerce has turned on the switch and the stored energy in these faithful and loyal citizens is going to people who never see the need of order its work. There are always some ganization, who live in the path from their home to their work, who don't know what their neighbor is doing on the next street. It is hard for them to get out of the rut and take an active part in the civic affairs of their community. The chamber of commerce would be a good place for these men to come and enjoy a meeting, get acquainted, and get out of the rut. You know some of this type in Circleville. Invite them to the next meeting so they can see what the chamber of commerce means to Circleville.

Look back—just one year—and see what the chamber of commerce has done. And they haven't had a large membership to do these things. You don't have to hesitate to tell the answer when asked, "What has the Chamber of Commerce done?" If some people would take as much interest in helping as they do in criticising much more could be accomplished.

"No, sir," said she.

"Didn't you ever hear of Islam?"

"No," said she.

"Well, surely you have heard of Mahomet?"

"No, Doctor Moody," said the girl earnestly, "and I might as well tell you right away that I don't know the names of all the other books in the Bible, either."

URGES ABANDONMENT OF 100,000 CHURCHES

Survey Finds They Do Not Fit Modern Conditions.

New York.—A survey of the church situation in communities throughout the United States, made by Frederick L. Collins for the Woman's Home Companion, has led him to recommend the immediate abandonment of at least 100,000 churches which he classes as "useless and parasitic."

In the March issue of the magazine, Mr. Collins gives the following fundamental facts regarding the church situation in America:

There are at present 200,000 churches in the United States. They belong to 200 different denominations and faiths.

They represent an investment of $3,000,000,000. They cost $300,000,000 a year to maintain.

They pay no taxes to the community. They pay their ministers an average wage of only $800 a year. They spend less than 50 cents per year per child on religious education.

The majority of them open their doors only three times a week for religious services.

Most of them were erected by people now dead. Many of them are maintained by funds bequeathed by the dead.

Most of them were erected when the village, not the town or city, was the unit of national life. Many of them were intended to meet the social need of an isolated rural existence which no longer prevails.

Many of them were built before the invention of the telephone, camera, bicycle and trolley car.

Almost all of them were built before the movie, the radio and the cheap car.

Writing under the title, "Shall We Tear Down the Churches?" Mr. Collins declares that the loss of the average Protestant church would hardly be felt by the community round about. "It is pathetic," he says "that the disappearance of so important a building as a Christian church should leave the daily life of the community practically untouched. But would it not be so with most churches in your town? It was in mine. As religious symbols in the eyes of the community the three struggling Baptist churches had already ceased to function. Few people, even few Christian people, realized that they were gone."

Modern Churches Necessary.

"This would be true of the average Protestant church—which is the only one I know anything about. The Catholic church is a thing apart. It performs so many services for its people which the Protestant church does not attempt that it cannot be judged by the same standards. I dare say even its humblest edifice would be seriously and sincerely missed. I am willing to believe that the same thing is true of many Christian Science churches. And I know it is true of most institutional structures, Protestant or Catholic, Christian or Jewish, built on modern plans to meet modern needs."

"But the average church would pass unnoticed to the house-wrecking companies. In brief, I suggest the immediate reduction, by at least one-half, of the existing places of worship, and the use of the savings thus realized for vigorous expansion of religious work."

"Church reduction viewed in this light is not a blow at religious prestige. It is a blow at dry rot. It is solemn recognition that the average church is not fit to meet modern conditions."

Lay 220-Foot Trestle in Seventeen Hours

Prairie du Chien, Wis.—A temporary trestle to fill the 220-foot gap left by the temporary removal of the big pontoon boat in the railroad bridge over the Mississippi river here was installed in 17 hours by four picked bridge crews.

Sixty 50-foot pilings had to be driven into the river bed and the ties and rails laid over them. A north-west blizzard made the work hazardous and progress slow and kept away hundreds of spectators. Only about a dozen persons braved the blizzard to watch the crews work.

Immediately after a late mail train passed over the bridge, the 90,000-ton pontoon boat was loosened from its moorings and floated out of line to permit the pile drivers to start work. The ice on the river is two feet thick, and cutting a path in which to move the big pontoon boat away proved a considerable task.

Two pile drivers were operated. Clams and clamshells to a depth of 14 feet were encountered on the surface of the river bed.

More Boys Than Girls Born; Deaths Even It

Washington.—According to the bureau of the census more boy babies than girl babies per unit of population are born in America annually, but in the struggle for existence the first twelve months the girls outlast the boys. Of the 1924 births, 932,431 were males and 938,183 females, or a proportion of 1,053 males to 1,000 females. Of the babies who died, under one year of age, there were 78,085 boys and 88,645 girls, or a proportion of 1,331 to 1,000.

The infant mortality rates for the states range from 53.8 per 1,000 in Oregon to 101.6 in South Carolina.

Ellen Was Her Dad's Escort

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

THE very first time David saw her he realized that the fellows who wrote about love at first sight knew exactly what they were yarning about.

"It not only can happen," muttered David as he watched her assisting her father onto the 8:35 train, "but it has happened. If I don't find some way of meeting and marrying that girl with the gray eyes and red hair—then it'll be me for lone bachelorhood for the rest of my days."

He was frightfully disappointed that she did not board the train also.

It was apparent that her father was recovering from some illness and that she was escorting him to his train to see that no harm befell him. David supposed she also would meet him in the evening.

Good luck was with David that morning for he was able by a little judicious shoving to obtain the seat beside her father.

"So far, so good," he inwardly commented as he settled himself beside the man who he hoped would some day be his father-in-law. Meantime he was casting about in his mind for a speedy and likely opening toward lasting conversation.

It came in a very pleasant way. The village bore, Fred Norwood, was making his way through the train and all eyes became glued to papers as he passed by lest perchance he might stop and talk. Scarcely a soul spoke to him so fearful were they that a passing word might lead to a full hour of his conversation which consisted entirely of Fred's troubles.

The girl's father was unfortunate enough to have let Fred catch his eye and would have been lost had not David turned a broad shoulder and thus effectively barred the boring one's speech from reaching the older man's ears.

When the danger was past the two turned to each other with a grin.

"Close shave, that," said the girl's father, "you saved me from an hour's tedium."

"Yes—frightful bore, isn't he? I've heard about his attack of indigestion after eating cucumbers and salmon so many times that I pretty nearly have it myself when he's done."

The elder man seemed ready to chat rather than read the paper.

"There's nothing in these papers any more but suicides, daylight robberies and murders—one gets fed up."

"You're right," said David, "and columns of road accidents."

The father laughed. "Yes, the road accidents worry my daughter. She frets until I get home at night. She sees me on the train every morning and—"

David laughed and drew a trifle nearer the old man. "Speaking of your daughter—I'm most frightfully in love with her—did you—know that?"

His companion looked his astonishment, but a half grin swept over his face.

"But why haven't I met you—seen you about the house?"

"That's just what I want to know," said David. "It's been a little trick of fate. You see I have only been in love with your daughter since 8:33 this morning—when I watched her helping you on the train. Now my idea is for you to cast an approving eye over me and—well the rest will be my work."

"I say, young fellow, is this some modern way of courting that I haven't heard about?"

"No, it's a way all my own," confessed David. "and to proceed; my name's David Wendell, thirty-one, quite decent, and have a splendid position in the advertising business."

The father grinned unexpectedly. "Then your future wife's name is Ellen and her father's is John Goodman, Shake."

The two men shook hands solemnly, then laughed.

"And to proceed," continued Goodman, "there is not a finer girl in the world. She is giving up the chance of a fine position simply because she won't let me come to the train by myself. I will be O. K. in another week or two but that will be too late for Ellen to secure this work. She says I've been a mother and father to her all her life and now she's going to be a mother to me—won't hear of anything else. The train she would have to take is a full hour earlier than mine so she couldn't see me safely aboard."

"The very thing for a start," said David enthusiastically. "I will stop by every morning and call for you—that is if Ellen approves of me as escort and she can take up her work if she wants to."

"By Jove, that would give her a chance. I know Ellen's frightfully keen on this position and it really is a flattering offer she has. I feel she wouldn't mind trusting me to you these mornings."

"There's only one thing I'm going to ask," said David, "and that is that this is a secret, for the time being, between you and me—Ellen mustn't suspect it's a plot but of course, Mr. Goodman, I won't mind in the least if you drop a kind word from time to time about me—just to plant a seed in her heart."

"That won't be so difficult, either. Dave, my boy—you're the kind of young fellow a father often thinks about when it comes to his pet daughter's choice."

And, of course, daughter's choice agreed with her father's.

NEW RICHES CAN NOW BUY ROYAL CASTLE

The chateau of Courcelles, formerly of France, soon to be in the United States, is being taken down stone by stone to be re-erected in the land of the free. Who will be first to sport a former imperial residence among the hill palaces of Westchester or in the Piping Rock belt of Long Island?

It is not always, or often, says the New York World, that a dozen royal castles are in the market at once. That opportunity is now open in Prussia, where the state finds itself in possession of 36 castles and palaces and eight hunting lodges formerly belonging to the Kaiser and his family. Those for which no government use can be discerned are to be sold to lessen the upkeep bills.

Here is a chance for ambitious Americans who have made their pile and a little more that they have not yet had the time to pile up. These castles are "echt K. u. Preference for Birds as Pets Is Increasing Imports into the United States of live birds for pets have increased more than 520 per cent and their value has increased 600 per cent in the last four years, according to the Department of Commerce. Revelation of actual figures to this effect bears out a general belief that a "bird renaissance" is on the way.

The majority of birds sold in America are imported, though domestic representation is growing constantly. The import figures are interesting. In 1922 we imported 192,000 birds valued at $122,000. In 1926 we imported 486,000 birds valued at $737,000. The average cost of each bird rose from 68 cents to $1.50, indicating better quality and keener demand. This year, according to an officer of the United Canary Breeders' association, the figures will be much higher.—Chicago Journal.

Proper Hitch Will Save Tractor Power

Much of Trouble Is Due to Incorrect Attachment.

Many farmers experience serious difficulty when they begin the operation of tractor plow outfits. Perhaps 75 per cent of this trouble may be laid to incorrect hitching of the plow to the tractor. If the plow does not run straight, level, and cut at uniform depths and widths, an entire season's plowing may be ruined and the machinery itself quickly worn out.

The plow should be adjusted to have proper "suction," and "land." The weight due to cutting, lifting and pulverizing the soil must be equally distributed on all the wheels in order that undue wear will not come on any part, and to give the wheel which operates the power lift sufficient traction to cause positive action in removing the plow bottoms from the ground. The hitch should be made so that the center line of the pull of the tractor coincides with the center line of draft of the plow. The center line of draft of a 14-inch plow comes about 2 inches from the land side of the bottom. On a 2-bottom plow it comes about 19 inches from the edge of the furrow wall. If the plow cannot be hitched so that these lines coincide, the plow should be favored. This means that the hitch should be made half-way between the two lines or else nearer to the center line of draft of the plow than to the center line of pull of the tractor.

A high hitch is bad because it tends to lift the plow out of the ground and take the weight off the wheels. This slows up the lift and thereby causes poor plowing. A hitch which is too low causes the plow to run "on its nose," and creates unnecessary wear on the share, increasing draft and doing poor work. Proper hitching considerably reduces the power necessary for plowing.

Time to Plan for Next Winter's Egg Supply

Culling the flock, early hatching and proper feeding and care will put pullets in the best condition for laying in October, November and December, months of rising prices for eggs, says Cora Cooke, poultry specialist with the agricultural extension division of the University of Minnesota. In December, 1921, she says, eggs were worth 40 to 50 cents a dozen. In January they had dropped to 25 and 30 cents, with the feed cost about the same.

Urging immediate planning for next year's egg production, Miss Cooke advocates hatching of all heavy breeds by April 15 and light breeds by May 15. Culling through the fall and winter will help to raise the flock average and lower the feed bill.

"The person who secures eggs in October, November and December makes the profit," she says.

Protection for Bees in Winter Very Important

On many farms where a few stands of bees are kept to furnish a home supply of honey, considerable losses are experienced during the winter months on account of failure to understand the habits of this insect. When going by a hive of bees in the winter time we often note the incessant humming and buzzing of the bees. The colder it is the faster they hum. They do this in order to keep up the temperature sufficiently to keep them alive. The harder they have to work the more likely they are to exhaust their vitality and be unable to gather honey the following summer. Windbreaks around the hives, together with other protection in the way of making the hive close and free from all drafts, will pay back returns.

Recommend That Mash Be Handy at All Times

In addition to the scratch grain and the green feed, it is recommended that a mash be kept before the birds at all times. The following ones are economical and effective: (1) 200 pounds of ground oats, 100 pounds of ground corn and 60 pounds of a pack-meal and bone; (2) 100 pounds of ground corn, 100 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds bran, 100 pounds of middlings and 80 pounds of the meat and bone feed; (3) 100 pounds of ground corn, 200 pounds of ground oats, 100 pounds of middlings, 100 pounds of gluten feed and 100 pounds of the meat and bone product.

Farm Hints

Substantial and convenient farm buildings save feed and labor.

Egg white is a good remedy for slight burns or scalds. It excludes the air and gives instant relief.

The four horsemen of better farming are soil building, balanced cropping, quality production and orderly marketing.

Working with the head indoors in bad weather will make working with the hands outdoors in good weather more profitable.

A hydraulic ram will operate if the water delivered to it has a fall of at least three feet and flows at a rate of at least two to six gallons a minute.

SIXTY-NINTH

Congress Died After a Hectic Session.

Washington, March 4.—With only three and a half hours left in the life of the sixty-ninth congress, the senate deadlock apparently remained unbroken when Vice President Dawes called the session to order at 8:30 o'clock.

Chairman Warren of the appropriations committee moved to take up the second deficiency appropriation bill, which would have sidetracked the resolution of Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, to continue the life of the special campaign funds committee and against which Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, has been filibustering.

Before a vote could be called for, Reed of Missouri, was on his feet with a demand for a quorum.

The motion of Senator Warren then was ruled out of order and Senator Curtis of Kansas, the Republican leader, pleaded with the senate that it give unanimous consent to take up the deficiency bill.

Reed of Missouri, said he would agree to vote immediately thereafter on his resolution.

"I object," shouted Reed of Pennsylvania, leaving the tangle just as it was when the senate adjourned at midnight. The quorum call showed 53 senators, or a majority, present.

Reed of Pennsylvania, then stirred the senate into a fight over farm relief. He proposed a vote on passage of the McNary-Haugen bill over President Coolidge's veto. An argument arose as to the method for voting on the measure.

In view of the stubborn opposition to the resolution by the Republicans, led by Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, there appeared little prospect that a vote would be reached on any pending bill, including the $125,000,000 public buildings authorization, alien property return and second deficiency bills.

Only a few odds and ends remained to be acted upon in the house. But the senate, which broke its two-day and two-night marathon session at 12:06 a. m. last night by an agreement reached in executive session to recess until early today, still had before it as the unfinished business the filibustering resolution of Senator Reed, Missouri, for continuation of his campaign fund committee during the summer recess, opposition against which has held up all other pending legislation.

Both houses were in session last night, and for a time the senate filibuster germ broke out in the house, where, despite drastic rules preventing such tactics, Democrats called for more than a dozen tedious roll calls in an effort to stave off a vote on a resolution to defer for one year operation of the national origins provision of the immigration law. The resolution finally was passed, however, and sent to the president before the body quit at 10 p. m.

SHORT STORIES OF THE BUCKEYE STATE

An Early Presbyterian In the Ohio Country.

One does not find much in this Allegheny history about the Rev. Dr. C. Beatty, but he was the first Presbyterian minister to preach a sermon west of the Alleghenies. He was the grandfather of Dr. C. C. Beatty, who was the founder of the Steubenville seminary, at which many of the noted Ohio men of the early days were educated.

Dr. C. Beatty was the chaplain of the forces of General John Forbes of the British army on the expedition against Fort Duquesne in 1758. Forbes having taken possession of the place, on Sunday evening, November 26—the day following the surrender—Chaplain Beatty preached a sermon to the troops and such civilians as wished to attend, which was the first sermon ever preached by a Presbyterian on the west side of the Appalachians.

Eight years after this he made a trip with a Dr. Duffield well out into what is now Ohio territory, and on one occasion, on September 21, 1766, preached to the Indians in the Tuscarawas valley.

A curious story of him as chaplain is told. While he was serving under the English provincial forces at Fort Allen, he found that the attendance at his religious services was not all that could be desired. The soldiers were remaining in quarters, and he made complaint to the commandant, who suggested that if the serving of grog to the men, which was then done regularly, were postponed until after the sermon, the attendance might be improved. The chaplain, who seems to have been a very practical man, agreed to the proposition; it was done and thereafter there appears to have been no further complaint about the attendance.—J. H. Galbraith in Columbus Dispatch.

HARI SINGH'S INDIAN REGIME SUCCESSFUL

Was "Mr. A." of Notorious Robinson Divorce Case.

Srinagar, India.—It is now a year since his highness Maharajah of Kashmir, Sir Hari Singh—"Mr. A."—came to the throne. Ever since 1921 he was president of the executive council and had supported the cause of reform in every way. But since the disclosure of the notorious Robinson divorce case, he went into retirement for more than six months, undergoing religious penance in order to appease his rigidly orthodox uncle and his still more eccentric coteries of old Hindu pundits.

Many were the almost unheard of and curious customs in this border state of Kashmir, which had to be faced by the young maharajah. It may be interesting to note that on the death of his old uncle, the chief executive office of the state issued a general order of "Bhadan," or the shaving of the beard, the mustache and the head of every Hindu male over sixteen years of age on the tenth day after the maharajah's death.

Disbands Swan Battalion.

Then again among the various responsibilities which the maharajah inherited was the special Swan battalion of 300 swans, absolutely white, headed by a creamy-colored one, a pet scheme of his old uncle, who believed them to be sacred birds belonging to Brahma, the creator of the Hindu trinity. They had a special guard with swans as their emblem and the whole battalion was taken to the royal tanks in the morning from the special inclosure in the maharajah's palace and escorted back in the evening. The roads on these occasions were closed to all traffic while the majestic birds waddled forth.

Sir Hari Singh wanted to get rid of the swans, but the pundits forbade it, saying that they were sacred. Sir Hari turned the tables on them nicely by making presents of them to all the old orthodox councillors of his uncle who had taken prominent part in making him do penance for his sins in England. He said that they were the custodians of the faith of his uncle and as a mark of royal favor he quietly distributed the swans amongst them, asking them to take special care of the sacred birds. This removed one of the stock attractions of Jammu, but decreased an enormous waste of palace money on the upkeep of the swans.

One of the main departments of the state was forests. Kashmir is well known for its valuable forests, but the old maharajah had given precious little attention to them. Under Sir Hari Singh the situation improved and by the end of October, after a year of his rule, the department returns showed a profit of $300,000 instead of only $50,000, recorded in the year previous. The Kashmir forest department controls about 10,000 square miles of jungle, or over 600,000,000 acres.

Stops Waste by Fire.

The villages used to burn large areas for making clearings to cultivate grass fodder. The new maharajah introduced resin tapping as a new industry and instead of the 100 square miles of forest burnt by villagers the year previous there was not a single square mile burnt during last year.

The strengthening of the forest department has resulted in stopping all smuggling and raiding and, with the newly appointed staff of European officers, it is hoped that this will cease. These officers have been lent to the Kashmir state by the government of India and have been specially detailed for the purpose.

The young maharajah has become the most popular figure in the state at the present time. Possessor of almost untold wealth, his highness is the embodiment of simplicity in his personal life. He is wearing white homespun cloth called khaddar, so much favored by Mahatma Gandhi.

He goes on observing all the old religious rites laid down by Hinduism, with punctilious regard for the old rites and ceremonies. He went on a pilgrimage on foot to the Shri Nathy's cave in the United provinces accompanied by a large retinue and thousands of pilgrims and gave away valuable presents, including an all-gold coat studded with jewels valued at over $25,000.

DR. NORCROSS PASSED AWAY LAST SUNDAY

Was Second Oldest Preacher in Methodist Conference—Reached Age of 82.

Rev. Allen H. Norcross, D. D., 82, second oldest minister in the Ohio M. E. conference and oldest in the state in point of service, died Sunday at his home, a mile north of Worthington.

For years he was active and prominent in affairs of the Pittsburgh, East Ohio and Ohio conferences. He was born near Brownsville, Pennsylvania, June 29, 1845 and early determined to enter the ministry.

He served as presiding elder of Cambridge district of the East Ohio conference for 30 years and for 20 years was district superintendent of the district. He also served as superintendent of Cleveland, Gallipolis, Columbus and Zanesville districts.

In 1886 he was chosen president of the Pittsburgh Female academy, then the leading college of the church for women in the midwest. He was there for nine years.

Returning to the Ohio conference he was interested in founding the M. E. Home for the Aged at College Hill, Cincinnati, and served as treasurer, president of the corporation, general manager and endowment officer of the institution. At his death he was the only remaining charter member of the home's board.

He was a member of the general conference of the church in 1884 and 1904 and in 1914 was chairman of the general conference committee on temperance out of which grew the present board of temperance, prohibition and the ecumenical conference in 1884 and public morals. He was a delegate to the Pan American congress of education in Toronto in 1890. He retired from active participation in church affairs in 1921.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Florence P. Norcross; two sons, Charles P., and Frank H. Norcross, New York and daughter, Mrs. W. E. Mathews, Pittsburgh.

Funeral services at 2 o'clock Wednesday at the Edward E. Fisher Broad street, Columbus, mortuary. Rev. P. H. Frye and Rev. T. H. Campbell officiating. Burial in Green Lawn cemetery.

LANCASTER BOY SCOUTS FIND MUMMY

Believed to be Body of Tarhe, Crane Chief of Indian Village on City Site.

John and Robert Goslin, of Lancaster Boy Scouts and youthful archaeologists, have unearthed in a cave what is believed to be the mummy of an Indian princess.

The well preserved body is encased in a shroud of woven reeds. The find has been classed as one of considerable importance by H. C. Shetrone, curator of the State Archaeological museum, where the mummy may be placed.

When dug from the rock shelter burial place 100 feet above a creek bed the mummy was lying on the right side, the knees drawn up, the chest and head resting on the right hand.

Pottery and other relics surrounded the body indicated a person of much importance. It is believed that the remains are those of the daughter of Tarhe, the Crane chief of the Indian village that once occupied the site on which Lancaster now stands.

THE ARMY OF LEARNERS

There are now 27,000,000 pupils enrolled in our country's schools, according to the U. S. commissioner of education. Fortunate America! In all but a few advanced lands, education is still difficult or impossible.

The United States places a school-book in the hands of every youth, and it says: "Here is the key of life and all real blessings. Strive, strain, and sweat, until you have learned how to use it."

American youth responds, up to a certain point. It troops to the school-house in an impressive parade. It opens the book, and sets out to learn. But when the lesson seems hard, and the head aches, and the warm spring sunshine pours in the window, and the crack of the batted ball is heard from the playground, youth sighs wearily. It asks if that insignificant looking little key is worth the effort. Frequently it decides it can use it well enough already. For such the key seems to stick, and it opens very few doors in that spacious House of Life.

Even those who really master it may not find that it unlocks those for midable doors called Money, Power and Fame. But it does open many fascinating portals, particularly that one called Knowledge, where one finds practical instruction by which one solves the daily problems, and where one meets the finest type of people and the wisest minds of all ages. — From Human Interest Editorials.

HARTMAN THEATER.

The run of the book and now the run of the play has extended from the Atlantic as far west as the Pacific coast so "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" is well known the country over to book lovers and playgoers alike. The local presentation with a New York company selected by Edgar Selwyn, the producer, will be made at the Hartman theater, Monday evening, March 7 with engagement being for the first half of the week only with matinee on Wednesday.

Of the play, it is said that not often a book, even with the sensational popularity of the gay story by Anita Loos, ever quite stepped out of its book covers into the footlights with such perfect fidelity to itself as does the delightful story of Lorelei and Dorothy of here and there on the gold digging road of their adventures.

But "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" embraces from all accounts the strange difficulties of the theater with as much abandon and emotional excitement as Lorelei does her rich friends. And it is declared, further, that the almost inspiring cleverness, a kind of intuition coupled with undeniable knowledge, has given a synthetic blend to the characters of the book and the players provided, to bring them out of the amusing leaves into pulsing life of actual impersonation.

Successful runs in Chicago, New York, and along the Pacific coast have brought "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" well to the fore among the best plays to see, and so one may expect that the performances will be rewarded by large attendance.

The principal players in a company numbering 21 are John Marion, Mary Ricard, William Courneen, Herbert Standing, Lois Arnold, Ada Sinclair, Edouard LaRoche, Josephine Morse, Martin Wolfson, Jay Roed, Lorna Marielo, Fred Backus, Gene Paul and Fred Monti.

"The Poor Nut" with Elliott Nugent as its star, blazes its triumphant way back for a return engagement of three night and Saturday matinee at the Hartman theater, beginning Thursday evening, March 10. This twinkling comedy, as you may know, presents the gayer side of college life, centered around fraternity and relay-racing high lights at Ohio State university, of which Mr. Nugent is an alumnus. The cast and production which graced the New York and Chicago stages thru "The Poor Nut's" amazing Metropolitan runs, again come to the Hartman, intact.

In the second act of "The Poor Nut" the audience witnesses a relay-race between Ohio State and Wisconsin, staged with such deft perfection as to have evoked high praise from critics in both Chicago and New York. It has been compared, in point of tenacity and thrilling power, to the famous chariot race in "Ben Hur." The "Poor Nut" of the play, acted by young Mr. Nugent, is a studious, bespectacled youth who suddenly attempts to make himself a heroic figure, thru athletics, before the eyes of a new flapper queen whom he secretly adores. The result of this precarious twist in an ordinarily, peaceful life, is shown with hilarious results in the course of the three acts of the play.

Elliott Nugent wrote "The Poor Nut" in collaboration with his father, J. C. Nugent, with whom he has written other highly successful Broadway plays including "Kempy" which scored a long Metropolitan run. "The Poor Nut" is presented by Patterson McNutt, now a New York theatrical producer, and formerly a Columbus boy. Thus, an Ohio play, by an Ohio author, staged by an Ohio producer, and with an Ohio star, will make the latter half of this (coming) week at the Hartman a gala occasion. Acting in Mr. Nugent's support are the same Broadway favorites who appeared with him earlier this season, including Norma Lee, Percy Helton, Betty Garde, Larry Fletcher, Cornelius Roddy, Frazier Coulter, Beach Cooke, Eric Kalhurst, Harry Gresham and Robert Scott.

There will be a special Student's matinee on Friday at 3 p. m. with special rates to students. Another matinee on Saturday.

INSPECTING MOTOR "COOLED BY STEAM"

An invention which will keep a motor cool by steam and which, it is claimed, will revolutionize the automobile and airplane industries, was demonstrated to the members of the house military affairs committee at the Capitol by Lester P. Barlow, its inventor (shown on the left). This invention, the rights of which have been offered to the United States, will keep a motor operating at exactly the same temperature under all conditions, according to Mr. Barlow. In the center of the group with paper in hand is Representative W. Frank James of Michigan, chairman of the committee.

CHECK YOUR CAR ON GAS MILEAGE

Owner Should Find Out How Much Fuel His Car Consumes on Trips.

The next hundred-mile trip you take it would be well worth your while to find out how much gas was used and the miles you traveled per gallon. This will give you a chance to compare the mileage you are actually securing with that which you should be getting.

Perhaps you may find that your gasoline economy is as high as can be expected from the particular car you are driving, but on the contrary, you may discover that your car is using far more fuel than it should and is thus proving unduly expensive.

High Gasoline Mileage.

How high gasoline mileage you should be securing can best be ascertained by inquiring of a number of other users of identical cars as to their mileage per gallon, and by asking the local representative of your make of car how many miles your car ought to be expected to do, on a gallon, on a 100-mile run under ordinary conditions.

Some of the figures you thus get may be exaggerated or in error, but by considering only those from sources you feel are reliable you will obtain a pretty accurate idea of what degree of fuel economy a car like yours ought to show.

Expected Gas Mileage.

Just as a hint as to the expected gas mileage of various cars of recent design, it may be said that mileages from 18 to 24 are attainable with four-cylinder cars of moderate weight, mileages of 14 to 18 with sixes of ordinary weight and of 10 to 14 with eights. These figures are mere approximations, and would doubtless prove incorrect for many makes and models, but they represent what may be called "educated guesswork."

If you feel that your car uses considerably more gas than you decide it should, judging from the testimony of other users and from general considerations, based upon the cylinder number of its engine, the car weight, weather conditions, and so forth, it is up to you to find and remove the causes of its fuel losses, if you care anything about economy of operation.

Don't Motor Over Grade

Crossings in High Gear

Despite the oft-repeated warnings about the dangers of crossing railroad tracks, thousands of people are killed and injured every year in automobile accidents at grade crossings, says C. E. Pettibone, vice president of the National Safety council.

It is advisable never to cross a railroad track in high gear. Many accidents happen because cars become stalled while on the track. It is safer to shift into intermediate or low gear a reasonable distance before crossing a track.

If your view is obstructed, or if required by law, come to a full stop before crossing; otherwise slow down to 15 miles per hour.

All crossings require your careful attention, whether guarded or not; crossing bells are sometimes out of order; watchmen or gate operators may be off duty.

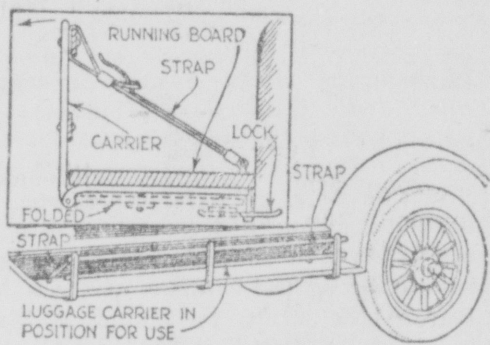

Be especially careful at crossings where there is more than one track. Do not cross directly behind a train that has just gone by. Another train may be coming in the opposite direction on the next track.

A train running 40 miles an hour goes 59 feet in one second and cannot be stopped in less than about one-quarter of a mile. An automobile running 25 miles an hour can be stopped in 58 feet. Which should stop, look and listen at railroad crossings, the train or the automobile?

Luggage Carrier Folds

This novel homemade luggage carrier is made so that it folds underneath the running board when not in use. Three large-sized strap hinges are bent as shown, and screwed to the underside of the running-board. Wooden or light metal strips are fastened to the movable member of the hinges

Careless Motor Driver

Always Most Dangerous

Traffic accidents throughout America are laid at the door of careless and indifferent motorists by National Safety council members, and New Orleans police agree that wanton negligence is the primary cause of a large part of the crashes in that city.

Capt. Eugene Casey, commanding New Orleans' traffic department, declares that the majority of traffic accidents—and fatalities—are the result of indifference in that drivers do not keep their thoughts on the powerful machine under their control and therefore, are not in position to think quickly and do the proper thing when necessity arises.

"Operating a high-powered motor car," Captain Casey declares, "is a job requiring the full—and clear—thoughts of the driver, and the man or woman who allows his or her thoughts to stray to other things while they are piloting the machine through traffic will in the course of time play the leading role in a crash of some sort, possibly not a fatal crash, but a crash."

Captain Casey points out that there are thousands of drivers who have been operating cars for years without an accident.

"Those are the drivers who enter their car with the knowledge that driving requires undivided attention."

AUTOMOBILE HINTS

The road hog is no respecter of persons, not being one himself.

Automobile parts and accessories showers are latest for brides.

On the approach of fire apparatus drive as near the curb as possible and stop.

At least the automobile has no tail to get over the reins and cause a runaway.

The fact that the grade crossing is in plain sight doesn't seem to mean anything.

Did you ever notice that where you didn't park your car you could park as long as you please?

If the truck driver is a real gentleman he will smile pleasantly when he splashes you.

One in every six has an automobile, thus showing that motor cars are running porphyria a close second.

Do not park within 15 feet of a fire plug, or in front of a mail box, or within 25 feet of an intersection.

HIGHWAYMEN WERE HUNGRY AND GASLESS

Compelled Marian Marion to Fill Up All Tanks With Gasoline and Lunch.

Arthur Davis, aged 17, giving his residence as Chillicothe, and Clarence Levinston, 24, giving his residence as Williamson, West Virginia, are in the county jail charged with highway robbery.

The young men are charged with holding up Marion Martin, of South Bloomfield Monday morning about 2 o'clock. The last named conducts a restaurant and filling station and he claims they demanded that he fill their gasoline tank and give them a lunch, which he did, at the persuasive point of a gun. As soon as they left the sheriff was notified and with his deputies, he started out after the young men. They were overtaken at the Walnut creek pike and a chase ensued. The bandits were overtaken on North Scioto street, where one of them jumped out. Sheriff Davis, held a bead on the driver of the car and told him to give up or die. The other bandit had a Smith & Wesson 32 caliber revolver in his hand when placed under arrest. The car in which they were riding was a Maxwell coupe with license tag 14882. They admitted stealing the car in Columbus.

Levinston also admitted having served time in the Mansfield reformatory.

Bottle's Long Voyage

In a little more than two years a tightly sealed bottle floated westward across the whole width of the Pacific ocean, a distance of 8,400 miles in a direct line from Central America to New Guinea. It was estimated that the bottle would have had to travel 11 miles every day if it took the shortest route.

Would I?

I often wonder if, when florists aim My purse to touch, A rose by any other name Would cost as much.

AMUSEMENTS

Take out the big bum!

"Kill the umpire!"

"Come on, kid, knock a homer!"

"There goes the old ball game!"

These, and all the other expressions which make baseball the game it is, are included in Wallace Beery's current Paramount starring comedy, "Casey at the Bat," which arrives at the Met theater today Beery perhaps the actor to have made most progress during the past twelve months, due to inimitable performances in "Behind the Front," "We're in the Navy Now" and "Old Ironsides" enacts the small town junk man who suddenly finds himself catapulted to fame and fortune when a big league baseball scout signs him to a Giant contract.

Imagine if you will (it isn't difficult) Beery as the hero of America, the Babe Ruth of 1901. Picture the laughs as Wallace hits a home run with one hand while holding a stein of beer in the other. Think of the roars that'll be forthcoming as he climbs on the stage of the old Casino theater and makes a personal appearance with the "original" Floradora sextette. Then comes a trip to Coney Island and you'll wonder what the wild waves are saying. A morning in bed, duped into believing he's very ill and finally—the big game!

Ford Sterling enacts Beery's Columbus by "discovering" him. ZaSu Pitts is the Centerville belle and Sterling Holloway, Beery's villainous manager. Monte Brice directed this Hector Turn bull production.

Exports of British India

British India annually exports goods to the value of $1,200,000,000. The leading kinds of exports are raw cotton and cotton yarn and manufactures, grain and flour, raw jute and jute manufactures, seeds, tea, metals and ores, hides and skins, leather, wool and woolsens. About 21 per cent of all the exports go to Great Britain.

CONSTRUCTION

Work on Chesapeake & Hocking
Right-of-Way Rapidly Progressing.

Rapid progress is being made in construction of a double track right-of-way for the Chesapeake & Hocking Railway between Gregg and Valley Crossing, south of Columbus, which will parallel the trackage of the Norfolk & Western.

Work of grading and construction of culverts and overhead crossings has been under way since November, and the trackage must be completed by Sept. 1, when the contract of the C. & O. with the N. & W. for use of the latter's tracks from Gregg to Valley Crossing expires.

The new trackage will be 63 miles long and will enable the C. & H. to double its tonnage through Columbus. Its construction was divided into eight contracts, seven of which called for eight miles of work and one for seven miles.

Overhead crossings and fills, together with grading, are being constructed near this city by the Dominion Construction Co., Niles, Mich., the Bates & Rogers Construction Co. and the Sturm & Dillard Company.

The work has been permitted to progress this winter through process of steam-curing the concrete which prevents it freezing during the cold weather.

Makes It All Right

Small Martha, on returning home from spending the day with her grandmother, made the startling announcement that one of her Irvington friends was going abroad, and as his wife was not able to go with him, he intended to take another man's wife.

Martha's mother became interested and immediately called up the grandmother to find out what kind of a conversation her daughter had been listening to. Her daughter's statement was verified, but with the added information that their friend intended taking his son-in-law's wife.—Indianapolis News.

GAS COMPANIES

FILE APPEAL

Of the U. S. District Court Decision In Columbus Gas Rate Case.

Columbus, March 5.—Appeal of the U. S. district court decision in the gas rate case between the Columbus Gas & Fuel Co. and the Federal Gas & Fuel Co. and the city of Columbus, as ordered effective Feb. 18, by Federal Judge Hough, was made Friday morning in federal court.

Three separate petitions in error were addressed for action by the U. S. circuit court of appeals for the six districts, one for each of the companies and one jointly.

The companies asked for a reversal of Judge Hough's decision fixing a 48-cent rate, and requiring the refund of the difference between that rate and the former rate of 55-65-75 cents, and also for the restoration of the injunction against demands of the city for extensions of lines into newly developed parts of the city.

ANOTHER TRIAL

Given By Franklin County Court of Appeals.

Columbus, March 5.—Lora E. Jones, formerly of Mt. Sterling, was given a new trial in her suit to recover $900 from the National Surety Co., because of the loss of a fur coat. The Franklin county court of appeals, Friday morning, reversed the action of the county court in directing a verdict in favor of the insurance company. Mrs. Jones, who resides with her daughter, Elizabeth Walters, and the husband of the latter, Ralph Walters, declared that she discovered the loss of the coat Sept. 14, 1923. She proved that she had the coat; other occupants of the house testified that they had not taken it and the appellate court held that this was sufficient to take the case to the jury.

Frock Modes Call for Soft Fabrics

Sheer Stuffs Promise to Establish Fashions for Coming Seasons.

Most engaging models are shown in the soft gowns, many of which are seen in the South and will establish new modes for the spring season in the North; there is great diversity of design, fabric, color and treatment. Polret has done a formal afternoon gown in crepe, trimmed with deep silk fringe in rows from the neck to the hem which has a new line curving upward in the middle of the back. Cheruit is going in for sheer stuffs, flounces, fluttering skirts and bows. The floral prints are being used by some of the best modistes in sweetly pretty frocks designed for the tea hour. There are crepes of somewhat heavy quality to be used in more formal costumes, "dragoman," "barcelona," "vagabond" crepe, shown in beautiful shades of rose, green and beige. There are some exceptionally handsome brocades, ribbed and corded, two-faced, in wave lines, figures, coin spots and flecks; the lighter crepes, voiles and chiffons.

These plain fabric gowns, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, are carried with many lovely new models in printed crepes and voiles. A cleverly built afternoon gown of vagabond crepe has a dolman sleeve, very long blouse, with a skirt that is narrow by contrast and a new strap sash that ties directly in front. A gown of butterfly taffeta is made with a long tunic that is slashed in the middle front and is confined about the hips with a buckle girdle. The tunic flares at the bottom over a slip of plain crepe showing three inches below. Pussywillow crepe printed in one of the grand canyon all-over patterns is cut in what appears to be a one-piece frock, but is really a two-piece, with a plain skirt, long, straight bodice that blouses over a girdle held by a buckle in the center front.

Afternoon Dress Novelty.

The one apparent novelty in fashions is afternoon dress. For many seasons there appears to have been no distinctive costume for the leisure hours between noon and night other than the clothes designed for every sport activity known to the social world. We have had this type of dress in so many variants and it has been made to serve so many occasions that its model is seen in most of the smart frocks and coats among the season's styles, however they are translated and in whatever manner they are labeled. With the exception of an exclusive few, the women one meets are content to go through the day with a frock or an ensemble that is of the kind that would formerly have answered for morning, for luncheon, or any time of day for which countless forms and made to do service of many different kinds of times. Its hold has been such that any and every sort of frock has been modeled after this design, the material and workmanship, color and trimming being the distinguishing feature.

Softening of Lines.

The first signs are the softening of lines, elaboration in trimming and the working into the architecture of a costume certain distinctive novelties. These include new and unusual ways of handling stuffs, a decided movement away from the arrangement of detail shown in the styles of former years. The whole tendency is in the direction of a more feminine type of dress. A frock that is otherwise simple is given a somewhat different air by gathering the fullness of the skirt toward the front, by unique spacing of plaits, by flares, godets, varied hem lines, cascading and floating drapery that all but carries the originally designed model over the line and into a wholly different, far more feminine sort of thing in dress. In all of the large collections are many charming frocks classified as sports, but so deftly constructed as to be most happily adopted for afternoon and more formal wear. With the coming of spring, frocks of this description will be more en vogue and are shown at the southern resorts in all of the new silks, crepes and mousselines.

In these there are few that are radically new in texture, for the last two years have been prolific in finely woven silk fabrics. The novelty in advance spring styles is in creation of design. These illustrate extraordinary flights of fancy, of art and skill. Pictorial patterns are woven into supple, lustrous silks in a way which more than any movement that has yet been shown places the industry among the fine arts. Because of these the season is one of uncommon interest to designers, who find in them inspiration to create more important costumes. With the courage of their convictions, dressmakers of both Europe and America are making more elaborate gowns and ensembles, going in heavily for the pictorial prints. They are unique, some are artistic, some entertaining, and all are out of the ordinary. They have found a place in the art gallery and now are being shown in countless delightful models for practical service in the spring and early summer. An American manufacturer of vision and originality has gone into the high spots of picturesque America for patterns which have been woven and printed in the latest silk fabrics. The most spectacular scenes in the landscape have been taken as motifs and successfully sketched with threads of silk, suggesting the theme in miniature.

Favors Supple Fabrics.

Among Paris artists who are creating distinctive afternoon gowns is Premet—graceful, smart, finished, showing a preference for supple fabrics in plain colors. One of the loveliest among Premet's late models designed for afternoon tea is a simple gown of black chiffon with drapery cascading from one hip, an uneven hem line and long mousquetaire sleeves. Jenny is contributing brilliantly to afternoon dress in some strikingly chic gowns. In one of plain crepe de chine, pin-tucking has been used in an original and masterful manner. The bodice is made with the crepe tucked all over in diagonal lines to a point at the bottom, very low, with the skirt forming a sunburst and lifted in front.

In another afternoon dress, also of crepe, Vionnet reverses the popular model that has a full-gathered front and places her drapery at the back in the form of a large flat jabot. In one picturesque translation of a Paris gown, the scheme of diagonal lines and sun-burst plaits is shown in beautifully shaded green crepe chiffon. In this the new capelike dolman sleeves are shown in a bodice that is drawn close in a girdle arrangement about the hips. In a charming frock that belies its "sports" label, is a one-piece of crepe Elizabeth arranged with a cascade at one side.

Airplanes Aid Drive Against Malaria in Cuba

Havana, Cuba.—Airplanes will be used to assist in stamping out malaria fever in eastern Cuba, where several thousand cases have been reported, if plans of Dr. Fernando Rensoli, director of sanitation, are put in force. The airplane will be used for spraying the breeding places of mosquitoes.

Doctor Rensoli also plans a general drainage of swamp land and the free introduction into rivers and streams of larva-destroying fish. A commission with full power to act in the cases of immigrants affected by malaria will be recommended.

The plan calls for a yearly appropriation of $3,000,000 to carry on the work.

U. S. CONSUL ATTACKED IN NIC- ARAGUAN TOWN

American Followed From Club and Then Beaten Into Unconsciousness In Home.

Washington, March 4.—An official report was received at the state department today from Minister Eberhardt at Managua, telling of an assault at Matagalpa on W. H. De Savigny, American consular agent.

De Savigny was followed as he returned home from a club at 1 a. m., the advices said, by two men, whom he could not identify, into his house, where they attacked him, apparently without weapons. He was discovered unconscious on the floor three hours later and found to be suffering from internal injuries, the extent of which have not been determined.

Minister Eberhardt said the Nicaraguan government had promised to spare no effort toward the apprehension and punishment of De Savigny's assailants.

De Savigny is 67 years old and has held the Matagalpa post since 1905.

Managua, Nicaragua, March 4.—The Managua Conservative government has mobilized 4,000 troops in the region of Chontales in an effort to drive out the Liberals from that region and to destroy their supply base. The Conservatives report successes in minor engagements at Camaopa and Bocao. At Camaopa the Liberals are reported to have looted the town before retreating.

Old-Timer, 100, Eats Cucumbers, Smokes

Kansas City, Mo.—Eating cucumbers and green corn need not keep one from living 100 years.

"Uncle" Jeb Newton of Springfield, Mo., who passed his one hundredth birthday June 23, would rather eat cucumbers than anything else, unless there is green corn and a good brown pork roast on the table. When he arrived at the Hotel Baltimore Uncle Jeb said the muddy roads between Kansas City and Springfield made him a little stiff, but he thought a dinner and a night's sleep would "fix me all right." He said he stood the motor car trip with his youngest son, Dwight E. Newton, forty-nine years old of Springfield, "pretty well for a young fellow."

Uncle Jeb turned back the years looking for a reason to which he might attribute his long life.

"It may have been my regular habits," he said laughingly. "I smoke from the time I get up in the morning until I go to bed at night. I also drink coffee with three meals a day and I feel pretty pert."

WANTED INCOME FIXED

All the deputies were busy assisting the taxpayers in preparing their tax returns on the last day of filing, when a negro came in and sat down by the desk of one of the assistants.

"What is your net income?" asked the deputy.

"Well, sah," replied the negro, "Ah hasn't got none. Dat's what Ah come in here fo'—to get you to fix it up."

Try This

"How dare you come in at this time of the night?" began Mrs. Peckmore, as she met her husband at the head of the stairs. "I suppose you have a good excuse, as usual?"

"No, my dear," replied Mr. Peckmore.

Then, as he hoped, she fainted, and he went to bed.—Legion Weekly.

COLUMBUS MURDERESS

Found Guilty Of First Degree
With Recommendation of Mercy.

Columbus, March 5.—After three and one-half hours' deliberation, a jury in the Franklin county criminal courts, Friday afternoon, returned the verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, but with a recommendation of mercy, against Rosa Friend, colored, aged 28, of 445 East Naghten street.

Mrs. Friend was indicted for shooting her husband, James Friend, last October, in front of 230 Cleveland avenue, as a result of a domestic quarrel. The verdict of the jury carried with it a sentence of life imprisonment in the penitentiary without hope of pardon except by the governor.

NO SUCH ANIMAL

On a shelf in the home of a local nature lover is a stuffed owl. Beside the owl, a few days ago, one of the children placed a small toy cow.

A visitor at the home looked at the two for some time, and then he said to the man of the house:

"I believe the owl, all right, but that little cow is a doggone lie."—Youngstown Telegram.

Jogs Wife's Memory

Smiff was always complaining of his wife's memory. "She can never remember anything," he said. "It's awful!"

"My wife was just as bad," said Bjones, "till I found a capital recipe."

"What was it?" asked Smiff, eagerly.

"Why," said Bjones, "whenever there's anything particular I want her to remember, I write it on a slip of paper and keep it in my trousers pocket."

OKANAGAN SERPENT VICTIM OF COLD

Monster's Death Struggles
Watched by an Indian

Vancouver, B. C.—"Heaving, crackling ice, thrown up into mounds, near the shore of Okanagan lake, a few miles north of Kelowna, B. C.," says a dispatch from there, formed the basis of reports that "Ogopogo, mystery monster," died during the recent cold weather.

Peter Simon, half-breed Indian, according to the dispatch, said that while hunting along the shore he saw the ice "torn asunder by some monster's struggles and fragments thrown far up on the shore."

"Timidly venturing near," it continues, "Peter said he could see the giant form, sinuous and powerful, outlined beneath the ice, the tall feebly thrashing for freedom and the huge head, bearing a resemblance to a sheep, raised twice in the agony of its struggles."

From his vantage point behind a tree, Peter watched the final battle for life, saw the great form become more and more feeble, then subside, gently into the ice. Creeping to the lake shore he made certain the monster was dead, then, dropping his rifle, rushed frantically back to Kelowna.

This "Ogopogo," or sea serpent, gained much publicity for Okanagan Lake, B. C., when it was first reported as striking terror into the hearts of the native population last summer by its sudden appearance in their lake.

In appearance the "Ogopogo" is described as measuring 20 feet from the tip of its black-whiskered snout to the end of its scalp, serpent-like tail. It has a head like a sheep, a body like a boa constrictor, and two fins near the head similar to automobile tires in texture.

Paper Buildings

Paper and seven other ingredients which are being kept secret are used in a new cheap building material invented by a Serbian sculptor, Yovan Peshitch. The product is lighter than brick and is said to be fire and water-proof, fire merely softening it a little. Its only limitation is that it is unsuitable for buildings of more than two stories.—Washington Star.

MAN SOUGHT

In Connection With Death of 14-
Year Old Girl.

Medina, O., March 5.—(UP.)—Three girls, of Lodi, Ohio, who received letters from a 27-year-old man sought by Medina County authorities in connection with the poison death of Marguerite Wagner, 14, were summoned to appear before Prosecutor Raymond Bennett today.

Bennett hopes to gain information from them which will lead to the man's arrest. A warrant for assault has been issued.

In a statement to relatives before she died in a Lodi hospital, the girl told of how the man assaulted her and then forced her to take four tablets.

Bennett said that he was contemplating asking the grand jury for a murder indictment against the man.

Reds Name Children After Cities, Bosses

Moscow.—An entirely new and revolutionary series of pre-noms has been adopted by the bolsheviks in the christening of their new-born children.

Instead of the old conventional names of Sergius, Peter, Ivan, Olga, Alexandra, Catherine and Elizabeth, children of communists nowadays are named after some great revolutionary leader, party, industry or political movement, or even after some town, river or song in soviet Russia.

For example many infants of bolshevik parents are "baptized" Communista, Proletaria, Industria, or Stallina, after Joseph Stalin, the big political boss of soviet Russia.

Others are given names based upon Russian nouns and adjectives possessing a special significance in the present revolutionary movement. "Liberatta" (liberty), for instance, is a name commonly given to baby girls, and in similar fashion, baby boys are often named "Liberi" (free).

The Circleville doctors say: "Kissing strangers is dangerous." You're right doctor, we have a friend who went to the hospital with a broken head for doing that very thing.

The greatest affliction a sensitive high-spirited woman can have is a husband that snores in church.

"His Supreme Sacrifice"

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

(Copyright.)

"WELCOME truly! At just the right minute. My garden was never quite so enchanting," Elsa said, softly, holding out both hands to the tall young fellow hurrying down the path. He pressed them warmly while she ran on: "Sunset-light—and fresh dew to bring out every scent. Lilies, roses, honeysuckle, pinks, best of all grape blossoms."

"You are leaving out—the greatest thing," the tall fellow, Leland Lyle, answered half tremulously: "Yourself—without you I shouldn't care for anything."

"For shame, Lee—are you running a temperature? Or are your pretty speeches spoiling for lack of air?" Elsa flung back saucily. "Either will excuse you—otherwise—" she shook her head judicially—yet without withdrawing her hands. Wherefore Master Leland kissed them, and linked her arm in his, keeping it there throughout a laggard threading of the garden ways, that ended only in the young vineyard's blossomy intricacies. Halted full in the strengthening moonlight, some wave beyond resistance flung them suddenly into each other's arms, held them for a long minute locked in a close embrace. Then Leland loosed his clasp and said, "Darling, a year back I gave a fool's promise—I go to keep it when I leave you. Please, please, don't hate me utterly, richly as I deserve it. I am without excuse—passion and ambition tempted me. I knew I had no love for the girl—but she is damnably desirable. Has money—safes of it—plus a winning manner—she seemed an easy way to the heights I hoped to achieve. In a week I shall marry her—and live unhappy ever after—"

"Go!" Elsa broke in firmly. "Keep your bargain fairly—promise me—unless you want me to despise you henceforth and forever. It is the only way of redemption for you. Now—go away please! You—you do not belong in my garden any more."

She hardly slept that night. At sweet and twenty she had had lovers galore, but until Leland came not one of them had stirred her to more than transient liking. Leland had come a long way to see his father's old friend, Judge Evans, Elsa's godfather, also the protector of her unworlly father, Reuben Reed. Thus the pair had been inevitably thrown swiftly into joyous comradery. It eased Elsa's heartache a little that Leland had made no protest—left her silently, covering his eyes as he turned from her as though to shut inside them some precious picture.

Mrs. Evans, queen of gossips, saw to it that Elsa knew all about the wedding—a bishop officiated—presents ran to half a million—the happy couple left by airplane to escape friendly foolery, also to reach in time the yacht, merely one among Madame Gordon's wedding gifts, in which they were to sail a-honeymooning round the world. Then followed blessed silence for a space of 18 months—California had beguiled the judge's wife into lingering there. Consequently he fell in the way of spending Sundays with the Reeds.

"Remember Lee Lyle?" he asked one evening. "Of all luck a fellow ever met up with, he's had the very cussedest—and the best. Married into that rotten Gordon stock—did a man's part to redeem the girl—and fell flat—and hard. Before they had been in Paris a month they had their house crumpled of what they call lounge-lizards on our side of the water. Mostly titled. They'd been to the Gordon bankers—knew Mercedes stood for five millions—plus expectations. What they didn't know was that it was tied up hard and fast—she could spend income but never touch principal—and no husband of any sort could claim anything beyond an allowance. Leland saw to that before he tangled in—would take nothing but commissions as her man of business—and, of course, his keep. Wonder that didn't choke him—it aged him ten years—you'd hardly know him. Of course, he was simply getting his come-uppance—this with a shrewd look at Elsa. "But, Lord, it's made a man of him—listen to this if you don't believe it."

"He held Mercedes with a tight rein until he found just what she wanted—a title, and a Paris husband—never meant to live anywhere else. He agreed she might have them provided he did the picking—had the whip hand since the settlements gave him control of her fortune in case of divorce, unless he agreed to it. He agreed—chose an oldish duke who struck him as the least bad of the lot, made it straight with him, got the divorce, double-riveted and copper-fastened, and though he wasn't best man at the wedding he saw to the villa on the Riviera and all the rest of it. He's home at last. And now comes the very richest part of the story—Old Madame, head of the Gordon clan, is so tickled over her 'great niece, the Duchess,' she's settled half a million outright on Lee for 'his supreme sacrifice' in permitting her dear child to reach the rank she deserved."

"He will not take it!" Elsa blazed. The judge smiled shrewdly. "Seems to me you know him nearly as well as I do. No—he unsettled it quick as lawyers could do it—but he can't escape the Gordon drag in finance—It'll make him rich in spite of himself. I'll leave the rest of it for him to tell—he's coming tonight so you won't have long to wait."

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES ARE HELD NIGHTLY

Miss Edna Banning, of Cleveland, Preached a Powerful Sermon Sunday Evening.

Revival at Calvary Evangelical church now in progress. Miss Edna Banning, of Cleveland, Ohio, evangelist. Services each evening at 7 o'clock. Everyone is invited. Don't miss one of the inspiring, helpful sermons by Miss Banning.

Sunday Night Sermon.

Text: "Therefore, we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip. And if the word spoken by the angels was steadfast and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward: How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" Romana 2:1-3.

We need to take heed to the things which we have heard, for these are days when men and women are letting them slip. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" One of the most tremendous questions you will have to deal with in all your life is this one, and there is only one answer. You may ask it of Jesus thru the golden gates of the skies. What will He say? With tears rolling over his face, He will give the only answer anyone can give "There is no escape, but damnation, for the soul that neglects this great salvation."

"I want to talk to you tonight about the great salvation. You know if I should talk from now on thru eternity the angels listening in would say, 'The half has never yet been told me.' The loving Creator of us all planned this salvation before you saw the light of day, before the fall of man. If we should fail to plan was there, and the whole world was saved thru the blood of the Lamb. If you sneer at this great salvation you are insulting your Christ in whose hands you will some day fall. It is a great salvation because Jesus bought it. I love Jesus tonight. How much do you love Him I wonder. We would have many a blessing we miss if we would have love-talks with Jesus, but we come begging all of the time, and seem to forget to tell Him we love Him. Jesus spilt His blood for me. Jesus came down to a world that had not asked for Him, that had not sent for Him. He wanted to get into the world to show them the love of God so He forced the door, then went up Golgotha's hill carrying the old-rugged cross, bearing the crown of thorns on His brow, and was crucified between two thieves. Why did they treat Him so? Because He was holy and they were full of sin. If you live a holy life it will rebuke sin in other lives. He died on the cruel cross for you and for me. If I would have been the only one in the world He would have done all that for me, and if you would have been the only one He would have done it for you.

This salvation is real, it is genuine. What the Book says it will do, it can do and it does do. It says, "He will save his people from their sins." The first work of grace is the forgiveness of sins, it puts you out of the sinning business. How much can He save us from? All of our sins. Then he has promised to sanctify us. "Jesus suffered without the gate that He might sanctify the people with His own blood." This great salvation has guaranteed to keep up, and then it is our passport to glory. If we stand true we can go thru the gates into the city of God.

WINNECKE COMET DUE NEXT JUNE

Rare as are days in June, a night in June this year will be rarer, for about midnight, about June 26, mortal eye will see unaided what it never saw before except thru telescopes, the Winnecke or PonsWinnecke comet.

The comet at present can be discerned only thru the most powerful instruments of astronomers, but for about one night in June it will be visible to the naked eye, according to Professor George Van Biesbrock, of Yerkes observatory of the University of Chicago.

About June 26, he said, the comet will be quite near—less than 4,000,000 miles away, June brides and bridegrooms may direct their eyes to the southeastern sky, towards the constellation Aquarius to see the phenomenon.

BIG BIRTHDAY SURPRISE THIRTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

As our revered Abraham Lincoln would say "Four score and seven years ago (less 57) our forefathers (?) brought forth in this city, an organization, etc., etc." In plain English, just thirty years ago the Circleville Athletic club first saw the light of day. In honor of this momentous occasion, a big celebration will be held at the Memorial hall, April 27, 28, 29 and 30th.

This celebration is the outgrowth of the club's policy to give the public plenty of good entertainment. Every effort is being put forth to make this the biggest celebration of its kind ever held in Circleville. Memorial hall will contain a thousand and one surprises for all who attend.

Celebrating the thirtieth anniversary of the Circleville Athletic club will be the Mardi Gras of Circleville. King Joy will reign supreme. It will be a time for everyone to cut loose from the care and worry of every day routine and have one grand, joyous time as the guests of the Circleville Athletic club. Free music, free attractions, free admission. Remember the dates April 27, 28, 29 and 30, 1927. Let's Go.
